THE MANSE

1850

Private

Ellicott City

The Manse is a three bay wide, two bay deep three and a half story high granite structure with a gabled roof running east-west and two brick chimneys rising out of its east wall. A three bay wide, two bay deep two story frame and granite (granite first floor and frame second floor) north wing springs from the north wall whose gabled roof, running north-south, intersects with the gabled roof of the main structure.

Fenestration is double-hung, proportionally scaled and vertically alligned on the south front facade, decorated with projecting stone sills and flat stone lintels.

The Manse is built into the slope of a hill so that the second floor in front becomes the first floor from the ground in the rear. Used as a home for the pastors of the First Presbyterian Church and their active families, stories are told of children see-sawing out of second floor rear windows and older boys sending signals to the girls at the Patapsco Female Institute on the adjoining hill. The Reverend M. Grier, the Reverend Huntington, the Reverend Pittinger, the Reverend Hooper and the Reverend Branch were early occupants of this very much lived-in and prayed-in home.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Manse is a three bay wide, two bay deep, three and a half story high granite structure with a gabled roof running east-west and two brick chimneys rising out of its east wall. A three bay wide, two bay deep two story frame and granite (granite first floor and frame second floor) north wing springs from the north wall whose gabled roof running north-south intersects with the gabled roof of the main structure.

The east wall of the south wing holds a second and third story rectangular window with six-over-six lites, flat stone lintels and projecting stone sills. A double attic window lies in the A of the gable composed of two rectangular double-hung windows with four-over-four lites. A rectangular entrance door is located in the north bay of the east wall which is approached by a stone terrace.

Three rectangular double-hung first and second floor windows holding six-over-six lites rest in the east wall of the stone and frame addition. (The building is built into the slope of a hill so that the second floor becomes the first floor.)

The grounds of the front of the house are terraced with two retaining stone walls and approached by three wide granite steps, a brick landing and an additional eight granite steps, which bring you to the one story high flat roofed open front porch which is supported by three square granite pillars. An iron railing runs along the perimeter of the porch roof creating a second floor terrace.

The deeply set rectangular red wood south entrance door is located in the west bay holding three lites and surmounted by a four lite transom. Two tall rectangular south windows lie in the middle and east bays, holding one-over-one lites and decorated by shutters. The windows on the second and third floors are rectangular in shape, holding six-over-six lites, decorated with shutters, proportionally scaled and vertically aligned. The second floor south windows in the east and west bays have flat stone lintels and projecting wooden sills. A central french door onto the terrace holds 4-4 lites and is decorated with a flat arched stretcher stone lintel surmounted by a flat stone lintel. The cornice of the roof is decorated with a row of simple brackets which give a dentil row effect.

The west wall of the house holds a first floor rectangular, double-hung window with two-over-two lites, two second floor rectangular double-hung windows with six-over-six lites, and a similar third floor window in the north bay of the original old house. An attic window with four-over-four lites is surmounted by a wide stone lintel.

A rectangular brick gabled roof (running east-west) structure once used as an outdoor kitchen, lies on the east side of the house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house served as a home for the pastors of the First Presbyterian Church, now the headquarters for the Howard County Historical Society. It was constructed in 1850 into the steep slope of a hill so that though three and a half stories high facing Church Road, it is only two stories high near the north wall of the original south wing. As in the case of many buildings built into the rocky slopes of Ellicott Mills, it creates an interesting effect. Its first floor has a front parlor and what was a small dug out cellar. The second floor holds a second floor sitting room (previously the pastor's study), a small bedroom, once a winter kitchen, a dining room and pantry. Three bedrooms (one a den) are located on the third floor. Recently acquired by Mr. & Mrs. Charles Hogg, Jr., the Manse has undergone restoration and become a pleasant sunny home for its new owners.

Between the years 1881-1909, the Reverend Henry Branch lived here with his family. Tales are told of children toppling out of the second floor bedroom windows on to the ground due to the slope of the hill and of older boys sending signals to the girls at the Patapsco Female Institute. In 1910 a new Manse was built near the Courthouse and church to enable the pastor to be more easily available for those seeking quick marriages. When the days of quick marriages came to an end, the old Manse was once again occupied by successive pastors until 1956 when the church outgrew its facilities. It was then bought and restored by Dr. & Mrs. William Van Royen and is now owned by Mr. & Mrs. Charles Hogg, Jr.
